individual is infected with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) and develops Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome (AIDS). It is estimated that 25,000,000 people in the world are infected with HIV and that in the U.S. alone, one million people are infected with HIV. Unfortunately, no cure is yet known and infection with HIV can result in death after a short period of time. Since the introduction of zidovudine in 1987, combination antiretroviral therapy (ART) has enabled about a million people to suppress the viral load to undetectable levels. However, each individual's HIV viral load is rarely zero, and lifelong treatment is required, in many cases, because new f678ea9f9e
