Zero-Gravity Fly-By: What The Media Isn't Telling You For millions of Americans in the 1970's, the Pope's arrival in the United States was greeted with great hope, as the Vatican's former Ambassador to the United States, Archbishop Paul Marcinkus, had spoken favorably of the Unification Church. As a result, he was much admired in the Unification Church. In addition, the Church's Survival Communication Service (CSS) had been helping the United States military with communications, particularly satellite communications for decades, as well as performing other support services. In the fall of 1977, the Church was preparing a number of significant activities for the Pope, including holding an International Congress for the Unification of the World in the U.S. What The Media Isn't T
